Spend one weekend — or even just an afternoon — in Vancouver and you'll start to realize how underrated it is. Located on the north bank of the Columbia River in the southern part of the state, this city has a lot of appeal, and it's only getting better.

Vancouver's waterfront recently made Fodor's list of 15 Best River Walks in the United States. Considering all the beautiful river walks that you'll find in this country, that's quite an honor.

During these uncertain times, please keep safety in mind and consider adding destinations to your bucket list to visit at a later date.

The Vancouver Waterfront features a two-mile paved path with some stunning views.

The city sits across the river from Portland, Oregon, so you'll enjoy city skylines as well as the rushing river and the mountains in the distance.

The focal point of the area is Grant Street Pier, which was designed to resemble the billow of a passing sailboat.

Locals and visitors alike love to hang out on the pier when they visit.

The Vancouver Waterfront is attracting all kinds of new shops, restaurants, breweries, and tasting rooms.

There are now six tasting rooms to choose from within a few blocks of each other, including Barnard Griffin. More wine is on the way as well.

There are plenty of restaurants, bars and tap rooms in the area, with more to come.

For a truly indulgent treat, head to The Yard Milkshake Bar.

The Yard, which was featured on Shark Tank, opened earlier this year.

The waterfront will also soon welcome The Hotel Indigo, Vancouver's first boutique property -- but it won't be the last.

The AC Hotel by Marriott will open in 2022.

If you haven't explored the Vancouver Waterfront in awhile, you're missing out on some exciting new additions.
